Braga

Braga
Cathedral

Braga is a city with over two thousand years of history that manages to blend quite nicely its patrimonial heritage with today's commercial and industrial prosperity; the city's recent development is also tightly connected with the foundation of the University of Minho.

The University of Minho

The University of Minho (UM) is a Public University established in 1973, and is considered to be one of Portugal's "new universities".

With over 19.500 students, 1.300 teachers and 800 non-teaching staff, the UM is one of the country's biggest universities, offering a wide range of first degree courses (Licenciatura) and postgraduate studies (Specialization Courses, Masters and Doctorate Degrees).

The UM is divided into three campi - Gualtar, in Braga, and Azurém and Couros, in Guimarães - both equipped with pedagogical complexes, Halls of Residence, canteens, libraries, laboratories, and sports complexes.

The UM has also some protocols with cultural associations such as the Braga Public Library, the Nogueira da Silva Museum, or the House Museum of Monção.

Guimarães

Guimarães
Castle

The city of Guimarães is best known as "Portugal's birthplace", for it was the place where the first king of Portugal was born, as well the kingdom of Portugal itself.

Cable car

Currently, Guimarães is a must-see city for all visitor. Its history, its richness of monuments, art and musea, along with the variety of colors offered by nature, do actually make for a one time opportunity for an unforgettable trip.
